

Opportunities

As a Women's Studies student, you will receive an invaluable educational background that provides the knowledge needed to critically examine changing gender roles in our society. You will have the opportunity to work with faculty doing research in areas including the following:

Feminism and Social Movements
Gender and Popular Culture
Sexuality and Health
Women and the U.S./Mexico Border
Diaspora Studies
Studies in Gender Violence
Education and Cultural Studies

Additionally, opportunities exist to pursue internships in the private and public sectors and non-profit organizations.

New College of Interdisciplinary Arts & Sciences

PO Box 37100
Phoenix, AZ 85069-7100
FAB N291

ASU at the West campus is located at 47th Ave. & Thunderbird Rd.
in Glendale

Phone: 602.543.3300

Arizona State University at the West campus

Women's Studies

Phone 602.543.3300

Career Paths

Women's Studies graduates are finding careers in the fields of:

Business

Government

Clinical Psychology and Counseling

Student Support Services

Social Services

Teaching

Health and Health Services

In addition, many of our graduates are accepted to graduate and professional degree programs in various areas of study such as arts and humanities, interdisciplinary programs, education, social sciences, ethnic studies, women's studies, law, health services, and psychology.

Academic Excellence

The Women's Studies program features faculty with a variety of academic backgrounds, theoretical perspectives, and life experiences offering a rich atmosphere for learning. The Women's Studies faculty emphasizes excellence in teaching, promotes critical thinking and cultural diversity, and provides individualized attention. They are dedicated to assisting you in achieving your career and academic objectives. Interdisciplinary in its approach, Women's Studies places gender and social justice at the center of the curriculum. The program is committed to providing its majors with strong cross-cultural, national, and global perspectives.

The Women's Studies program is committed to providing its majors with a meaningful education with strong cross-cultural and international perspectives. The program is interdisciplinary in its approach, structured so the study of gender is at the center of the curriculum and is combined with other academic disciplines.

Women's Studies Resource Center

The Women's Studies Resource Center at the West campus serves as a community resource sponsoring cultural events, promoting local and global research, outreach, and feminist activism.

602.543.3421